

I strongly object to the challenge by the Consumer Bankers Association to weaken Indiana's telephone privacy law that was designed to eliminate unwanted solicitation calls. In my opinion, calls by banks to past or present customers fall in this category. If they are interested in generating more business, this should be done by written mail as consumers are warned not to agree to business arrangements by phone. Thank you.